Governor Smith Tells You He Is Against Prohibition
Our Prosperity Is False
So Is Coolidge Economy

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

SEVENTY MILLIONS on the radio heard Governor Smith talking plain English that anybody could understand.

He believes government exists for the people. "An elect class should not be the special object of the government's concern." Richard Rumbold put it nearly 300 years ago, "I never could believe that Providence had sent a few men into the world, ready booted and spurred to ride, and millions ready saddled and bridled to be ridden." They beheaded Rumbold in 1685. Governor Smith will be more fortunate.

THE governor's opinion on prohibition—it is plain enough. HE IS AGAINST IT. He would change the Eighteenth amendment, not kill it entirely. He would let each state import or manufacture alcoholic beverages, but "not for consumption in any public place."

THE saloon is and ought to be dead, he says. State's control of alcoholic beverages and their sale, such as exists in Canada, would do away with the 35,000 or more speakeasies that can now be found in one city in this country.

WHATEVER the law, if Governor Smith is elected president, he will enforce it until changed. He will "make an honest endeavor to enforce the Eighteenth amendment and all laws enacted pursuant thereto."

GOVERNOR SMITH wants the Democratic party to give all "equal opportunity." He agrees with Napoleon, whose motto was "careers open to talent."

Governor Smith praises Grover Cleveland for originating one of the Democratic party's greatest principles, "Public office is a public trust." The Romans said it first Salus populi suprema lex esto, and that's the motto of the state of Missouri now.

GROVER CLEVELAND'S "rugged honesty" Governor Smith contrasts with "the widespread dishonesty that has honeycombed the Republican administration." The governor finds "four million men desirous to work and support their families unable to secure employment," and doesn't think much of alleged Republican prosperity.

AND the Republican party really isn't economical. The governor gives figures to prove it.

President Coolidge, for last year, asked appropriation bills exceeding by $500,000,000 those of the first year of his administration.

COOLIDGE economy, you are told, is a myth taxes have not been reduced in volumes, although tax rates have been reduced. Last year the government took $383,000,000 more in income tax than it took in Coolidge's first year. The president would reply that "Because people are earning more, the Republicans did it."

"FREEDOM from entangling alliances is a fixed American policy." Ninety per cent of Americans not engaged in international banking would say amen to that line of the Smith speech.

Governor Smith looks upon agriculture as "essentially a public function, affected with a clear and unquestionable public interest." He favors helping the farmer and gives figures to show what has happened to them lately, including a decrease of twenty billion dollars in the value of farm land in five years.

MORE and better roads for transporting farm products, more canals for "commodities of great bulk, least profitable to railroads" are advocated, and an all-American route from the Great Lakes to the ocean.

THE governor would have a waterway to the gulf through the Mississippi, would take care of floods and think carefully before letting private interest control any more water power. Disclosures as to power trust propaganda impress him.

GOVERNOR SMITH would let all states with a just claim share in power generated by the Colorado river.

UNION FAVORS LANDING FIELD ENLARGEMENT

Marion Labor Organization Advocates Purchase of Additional Acreage

MEETING LAST NIGHT

Will Outline Views in Letter To Be Forwarded to City Council

Marion Central Labor union went on record at a meeting last night as being in favor of purchasing additional land for enlargement of the Municipal airport site.

This action was taken in connection with approval of the step already taken by council to purchase a tract of 104 acres west of the city as a landing field site.

The labor union expressed the opinion that additional acreage should be bought while it is available at a fair price. The city holds an option on 140 acres adjoining the 104 acres provided for in the first purchase.

Letter to Council

A letter reporting this action of the union will be forwarded to council prior to its meeting next Monday night.

An expression of thanks was also voted to the Junior Chamber of Commerce for its willingness to co-operate with the Central Labor Union in plans for the local Labor day celebration. Plans for dedication of the airport have been delayed until a later date, it was announced.

Two new delegates to the Central Labor union were seated at last night's meeting, held at the union hall, Main and Church sts. They were from Marion Typographical union, No. 675.

Cahill Gives Talk

Cutler S. Cahill, president of the Typographical union, was a visitors and gave a short talk.

A report from the American Federation of Labor stated that the national organization will be neutral in the presidential campaign and that there will be no expression of preference for either Hoover or Smith.

DEMOCRATIC TARIFF RECORD IS ATTACKED

Curtis Starts Campaign To Win East for Republican Cause

Rocky Point, R. I., Aug. 23—With a declaration that the Democratic party never placed a tariff law on the statute books which did not injure honest business, Senator Charles Curtis, Republican vice presidential nominee, today opened the Republican drive to win the east.

Coupled with his assault on the Democrat tariff record was a recitation of the accomplishments of the Republican party in economically managing the country's affairs and reducing the public debt in the last eight years.

The vice presidential candidate's speech was delivered to a conference of Rhode Island Republicans, called in this resort town to map out plans for the fall campaign.

"Republicans may safely go to the people on their record of the last eight years," Senator Curtis said, in his plea for the Hoover-Curtis ticket.

He traced the Democratic declarations on the tariff as written into their national platforms since 1892 and said that this record was sufficient to convince protectionists that their hope lay in the opposition party.

BROOKHART AND NYE BACK HOOVER STAND

Insurgents Believe He Will Attempt To Solve Farm Problem

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Aug. 23—Although prohibition has plunged into the national spotlight as the major issue of the coming presidential election, Herbert Hoover today continued to strengthen his hold on the grain belt through conferences here with farm leaders from 14 midwestern states.

The Republican nominee explained his farm relief program to agriculturists from Missouri, Oklahoma, Nebraska, Kansas, North and South Dakota, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, Illinois, Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana and Tennessee. He discussed in detail his plan for a federal farm board and told the farmers he favored arming the proposed board "with wide authority and ample resources to deal with all phases of farming and aiding it with all agencies of the government as a means of bringing about general economic stability in the farming industry."

Hoover made a decided hit with the farm leaders. They came away convinced of the sincerity of his purpose to attempt a solution of the farm problem. They said frankly that they expected him to succeed, in view of his success with other important economic and engineering problems.

The nominee won one outstanding convert since coming to Iowa, when he was indorsed by Senator Gerald P. Nye, the North Dakota insurgent. Nye's indorsement virtually insured a victory for Hoover in the Dakotas next November.

Nye, silent since the Kansas City convention, followed in the footsteps of

REPUBLICAN LEADERS CRITICAL OF SPEECH

Smith Acceptance Draws Fire of Men Attending Hoover Rally

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Aug. 23—Republican leaders here for the Hoover rally were highly critical today of the acceptance speech of Gov. Alfred E. Smith.

Some of the comment follows:

Senator Arthur Robinson, Republican, Indiana: "Governor Smith has lost the election with a single speech; he has put all his eggs in a basket of booze and he will find the American people expect something more than an attack on prohibition from the man they elect to the presidency."

Senator Arthur Capper, Republican of Kansas, insurgent: "Agriculture will be bitterly disappointed with Governor Smith's promise of another conference. Hoover, always a friend of the farmer, announced an affirmative plan of relief. The farmers will note the difference."

Senator Smith W. Brookhart, Iowa, insurgent: "Ego is the outstanding style of Smith's address. I counted 100 'I's' in it and then thought of 'Lindbergh and we.' He spoke of keeping his oath as president to enforce the constitution, yet he took the same oath, as governor of New York, and then repealed the enforcement act of his state. His proposals for farm relief might be described by the words 'ignorance' and 'camouflage.'"

KELLOGG WELCOME

Official Reception Planned in Havre for Secretary

Paris, Aug. 23—An official reception will be accorded American Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg when he arrives at Havre tomorrow upon the liner Ile De France. Aside from United States Ambassador Myron T. Herrick, he will be the first American diplomat to set foot upon French soil in nine years.

The cabinet met today to make plans for the international conference at which the anti-war treaty will be signed. It is probable that this pact will go down in history as the "Kellogg treaty" as Secretary Kellogg was completely responsible in bringing it about.

SIGNALS REVIVE HOPE FOR MISSING FLIERS

Faint Messages Received by Two Radio Stations in Chicago

Chicago, Aug. 23—Possibility that Parker Cramer and Bert Haswell, pilots of the Greater Rockford missing plane, may be alive, but down in some inaccessible spot in the Canadian barrens of Labrador, has been revived by faint signals received by two Chicagoans, owners of powerful radio receiving sets.

Dr. Charles E. Scoleth operates station 9GZ, under federal government numerals, from his apartment in a Lake Shore hotel. Irving Strauss has station 9AAS, also federally listed at his home.

Both have heard, during the last three nights, faint signals, in a half clear tone, on a wave length of approximately 20 meters. The signals, as interpreted by both Dr. Scoleth and Mr. Strauss consisted of five "D's" followed by five "D's" repeated 10 times in sequence, followed rapidly by two "A's."

"The letter 'R' means position in international code," explained Dr. Scoleth. "The letter 'D' means nothing, and neither does the letter 'A.' We understand, however, that the fliers had a prearranged code indicating fixed positions along their circle course, by alphabetical designations. That might mean position 'D'.

FOUR BOY BANDITS TAKE $18,000 LOOT

Shots Exchanged as Youths Dash Away After Holdup of Paymaster

New York, Aug. 23—Four boy bandits swooped down upon the garage of the Surface Transportation Co., in the Bronx today, held up the paymaster and escaped with $18,000.

Pursued by employes of the garage as they dashed away in a large sedan the bandits opened fire on their trailers, striking one man in the right leg and riddling the pursuing car. Fifteen shots were fired in the running fusillade.

SMITH AWAITS REACTION OF U.S. TO SPEECH

Democratic Nominee Decides To Win or Lose on Sole Dry Issue

TO MAP CAMPAIGN

First Trip Probably Will Take Candidate to Pacific Coast

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 23—Having definitely thrust prohibition to the front in the presidential campaign by demanding a drastic change in the Eighteenth amendment as well as modification of the Volstead law, Gov. Al Smith today anxiously awaited the country's reaction to his acceptance speech.

That Smith, after careful thought, has decided to win or lose the presidency on the sole issue of prohibition, with a smattering of farm relief, was the opinion of virtually every Democratic leader who came here for the notification ceremony.

The first batch of messages which poured into the executive mansion last night and early today congratulated the governor on his stand on prohibition. These messages, his advisers said, came from voters in virtually every state in the union.

Will Discuss All Issues

Confident that the south will remain Democratic despite his wet stand, Smith is said to feel that by taking a decided stand against prohibition he has a good chance of carrying a sufficient number of the normally Republican eastern states, to insure his election.

In the active campaign, which is expected to get under way shortly after Labor day, the governor will discuss all of the issues which he outlined in his acceptance speech, but always, his friends predict, he will emphasize prohibition. He will reiterate that, as president, he will rigidly enforce the prohibition law so long as it remains the law of the land, that he is unalterably opposed to the return of the saloon, but that he feels it would be his solemn duty to urge an amendment to the prohibition amendment and liberalization of the Volstead law.

Would Give States Control

The governor's plan for a fundamental change in the prohibition amendment would permit each state, if a majority of the voters approved, to sell, manufacture or import alcoholic beverages. He would, however, limit the sale of such beverages to the state itself with the provision that they could not be consumed in public places.

In his campaign speeches Smith will stress the point that under this proposal, states which are really dry could continue to have prohibition while wet states could have liquor for private consumption.

The governor long has taken the attitude that the Volstead law should be modified so that each state would be

FORMER PROSECUTOR SLAIN BY OFFICERS

Threatens Deputy Sheriffs When They Seek To Raid Home at Ashland

Ashland, Aug. 23—Threats to kill deputy sheriffs when they attempted to raid his home near here, today had resulted in the instant death to George Frey, 70, from bullets said to have been fired by Deputy Sheriffs Charles Hamlinger and Tom Easterly. It is not known which deputy's bullet killed Frey.

Frey was three times Ashland county's prosecuting attorney, holding office from 1906 to 1912.

According to the deputies, Frey threatened them with a shotgun yesterday morning when they went to search his home for liquor. Again in the afternoon Hamlinger and Easterly went to Frey's home and again were threatened. This time the deputies opened fire.

Four other men were found in the Frey home after the shooting. They were said to have been slightly injured by the bullets, and offered no resistance to the officers after Frey fell dead.

A large quantity of mash, two bottles of alleged liquor and a number of cans said to be liquor containers were found in Frey's home after a search following the shooting.

Cleveland, Aug. 23—M. F. Bramley, Cleveland millionaire, who says his yacht, The Buddy, was fired on and rammed by the government coast guard cutter CG-2321, last night, was preparing to make vigorous complaint to federal officials today.

The yacht, occupied by himself and a party of friends, was cruising about two miles off the coast here when it was approached by the cutter, Bramley says, a shot was fired and a moment later the cutter rammed his yacht in a glancing fashion.

At Rocky River the yacht was searched. He was uncertain until then as to whether or not it was a government boat, Bramley said. No explanation of the damage to the yacht has been made. Coast guard officials would make no statement this morning.

"My mother read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and advised me to send for a free sample, which I did. I was very much pleased for it gave quick relief. WILL ROGERS PLANS TO AID FRED STONE

Will "Pass Up" $500,000 in Contracts To Open Music Show on Time

New York, Aug. 23—Will Rogers, actor and humorist, has passed up $500,000 to come to the aid of his friend, Fred Stone, actor, injured in an airplane accident Aug. 3.

He is giving up movie and monologue contracts to that amount to return to the New York stage and sub for Stone in a production booked for opening Oct. 1.

Stone's daughter, Dorothy, will also appear in the production. Rogers is expected in New York Sept. 10.

The lasso artist was booked after reading Stone the following wire:

"If you don't want Dorothy to wait until you are entirely recovered I will go in the show with her, just to sort of plug it along till you are able to room, and I will do the best I can with your part. Dorothy can keep telling me how you would have played it. Dorothy would, of course, be the star, and I don't want any billing. Anything you, Dorothy and Dillingham say goes with me."

Rogers appeared in several editions of the Ziegfeld "Follies" but for several seasons past he has delivered his typical monologues in concert and personal appearance tours.

Smith Declares for Drastic Change in Prohibition in Speech

ADDRESSES MILLIONS BY MEANS OF RADIO

Nominee Promises To Make Honest Effort To Enforce Law

DOESN'T MINCE WORDS

Asserts Temperance Has Not Been Achieved Under Present System

[illegible] Steps, Albany, N. Y., Aug. [illegible] formally accepting the Democratic presidential nomination, Gov. Alfred E. Smith, last night declared for drastic change in the prohibition amendment as well as modification of the Volstead act.

It has been generally accepted that the governor would recommend modification of the Volstead law but his suggestion that the Eighteenth Amendment itself be changed came like a bolt from a clear sky even to most of his own advisers.

Addressing a vast audience, including a 20,000,000 radio listeners, he promised he would make an honest effort to enforce prohibition in the event of his election. At the same time, he said, he felt it would be his duty to suggest changes in the prohibition amendment and the Volstead act.

In characteristic Smith fashion he discussed every national issue without mincing words.

He devoted more of his speech to prohibition than to any other one subject with the possible exception of agriculture.

He said he believed the prohibition amendment should be changed so that each state, if a majority of the voters approved, could import, manufacture or sell alcoholic beverages. He would limit the sale, however, to the state, and would prohibit the consumption of liquor in public places.

As for the Volstead law, he said, that it should be amended so that there could be a scientific definition of the alcoholic content of an intoxicating beverage. He would then permit each state to fix its own standard of alcoholic content with a provision that it could not exceed the maximum fixed by Congress.

Smith clearly indicated that he intends to make prohibition the major issue of the campaign.

Declaring that he is a believer in temperance, but that temperance has not been achieved under the present system, the governor said:

"The mothers and fathers of young men and young women throughout this land know the anxiety and worry which has been brought to them by their children's use of liquor in a way which was unknown before prohibition. I believe in reverence for law. Today disregard of the prohibition laws is insidiously sapping respect for all law. I raise, therefore, what I profoundly believe to be a great moral issue involving the righteousness of our national conduct and the protection of our children's morals."

The governor said that remedy of the prohibition question is the "fearless, application of Jeffersonian principles."

"Jefferson and his followers foresaw the complex activities of this great, widespread country," Smith said. "They knew that in rural, sparsely settled districts people would develop different desires and customs from those in densely populated sections and that if we were to be a nation united on truly national matters, there had to be a differentiation in local laws to allow for local habits. It was for this reason that the Democratic platform in 1884 announced 'We oppose sumptuary laws which vex the citizens and interfere with individual liberty', and it was for that reason that Woodrow Wilson vetoed the Volstead act.

"In accordance with this Democratic principle, some immediate relief would come from an amendment to the Volstead law giving a scientific definition of the alcoholic content of an intoxicating beverage. The present definition is admittedly inaccurate and unscientific. Each state would then be allowed to fix its own standard of alcoholic content, subject always to the proviso that standard could not exceed the maximum fixed by Congress."

In announcing that he favored a change in the prohibition amendment, Smith said:

Let People Decide

"I believe, moreover, that there should be submitted to the people the question of some change in the provisions of the Eighteenth amendment. Certainly, no one foresaw when the amendment was ratified the conditions which exist today of bootlegging, corruption and open violation of the law in all parts of the country. The people themselves should after three eight years of trial be permitted to say whether existing conditions should be rectified. I personally believe in an amendment to the Eighteenth amendment which would give to each individual state itself only after approval by a referendum popular vote of its people the right wholly within its borders to import, manufacture or cause to be manufactured and sell alcholic beverages, the sale to be made only to the State itself and not for consumption in any public place. We may well learn from the experience of other nations. Our Canadian neighbors have gone far in this manner to solve this problem by the method of sale made by the state itself and not by private individuals."

The governor said there was no question of the return of the saloon in his suggestion that the eighteenth amendment be changed and that the Volstead law be modified.

"When I stated," he said, "that the saloon is and ought to be a defunct institution in this country I meant it. I mean it today. I will never advocate nor approve any law which directly or indirectly permits the return of the saloon."

He said his suggestion, however, would preserve for the dry states the benefit of a national law that would continue to make interstate shipment of intoxicating beverages a crime, and that it also would preserve for such states prohibition within their own borders.

"It would permit," he added, "to citizens of other states a carefully limited and controlled method of effectuating the popular will wholly within the borders of those states without the old evil of the saloon."

The governor said he believed his plan would "re-establish respect for law and terminate the agitation which has injected discord into the ranks of the great political parties which should be standing for the accomplishment of fundamental programs for the nation."

The governor frankly made a bid for the votes of the Republican farmers. He virtually endorsed the principle of the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill which was vetoed by President Coolidge, and while he did not mention the equalization fee, he did say he favored the control of surplus crops and the distribution of the cost over the crop benefited.

In the event of his election he said he would immediately call into conference those farm experts and economists to work out a concrete farm relief plan.

Declaring that government should be constructive and not destructive, progressive, not reactionary, the governor added:

"I am entirely unwilling to accept the old order of things as the best unless and until I become convinced that it cannot be made better."

He charged that the Republican party today is controlled by a reactionary element which, he said, seeks to vindicate the theory of benevolent oligarchy.

He charged that the Republican party today stands responsible for the widespread dishonesty that has honeycombed its administration.

The nominee characterized Republican claims of prosperity as a "myth."

"When four million men, desirous to work and support their families, are unable to secure employment there is very little in the picture of prosperity to attract them and the millions dependent upon them," he asserted.

Tariff Views

In concluding his discussion of the tariff, the Governor told the voters of the nation:

"Pay no attention to the Republican propaganda and accept my assurance as the leader of our party that Democratic tariff legislation will be honest. It will play no favorites. It will do justice to every element in the nation."

In assuming the Republican party has failed to carry out a promise it made in 1921 to reorganize the machinery of the federal government, Smith said that if elected he would immediately see to it that all unnecessary and overlapping agencies were abolished or consolidated.

Regarding its foreign policy the governor said the country must rise above party politics and act as a united nation. He stressed the necessity for the restoration of cordial relations with Latin America and condemned the Republican administration at Washington for sending troops into Nicaragua because of an election dispute between two factions in that country, without the consent of Congress.

Aid for War Vets

The governor told war veterans in so many words that if he is elected President he will cut away the red tape and that when a veteran in distress calls for help he will get it and get it promptly.

While asserting that he stands on the Democratic platform which declares that the laws which limit immigration must be preserved, the governor said he was heartily in favor of removing the harsh provisions which separate families.

In concluding his speech the governor stressed the point that he does not owe his nomination to any one man or set of men and that it was not brought about by any promises given or implied by him.

RHEU-GO EXPERT

SAYS:

I am a Registered Pharmacist in two states and while attending a school of pharmacy, several years ago I became interested in the treatment of rheumatism and its kindred ailments.

After careful study and realizing the proper drugs to use for speedy relief—and if possible a cure—for these diseases, also realizing that these drugs oftimes destroy or nauseated the stomach—I began my study to overcome these difficulties.

As the years went by and by the aid and untiring help of a brother Pharmacist and by careful study of these well-known drugs and their action on the system, for relief and treatment of pain and swollen joints, I finally reached the goal I had sought and perfected this well-known treatment of today.

I have appeared personally in three states, namely: Indiana, W. Virginia and Ohio, and today this treatment is rapidly becoming known throughout the U. S. A. and some foreign countries.

Sincerely,
P. D. GAINES.

P. S.—I wish to further say, that I have been a rheumatic sufferer for fifteen years, suffering the most painful form, known as Sciatica. I have had various treatments, including the mineral baths, electrical and medical attention in various sanitariums. I WILL EXPLAIN FULLY AT STUMP & SAMS HOW I WAS CURED.

Europe Not Sold on U. S. A.

Say California Too Far Away for Olympic Games

By FRANK MENKE

IF Europe doesn't change its mind the Olympics of 1932, if put on in Los Angeles, may result in nothing but a sort of old home week celebration for boys of the U. S. A.

"California is too far away," sayeth Europe and, having said that, Europe considers the incident closed.

It's a 3000 mile jaunt from the nearest European seaport to New York and its about 3000 miles more to Los Angeles. So the nearest Olympic neighbors are at least 6000 miles from California, while blokes living far inland, Italians and such would have to jaunt anywhere from 7000 to 8000 miles to mingle in the Olympics of 1932 if Los Angeles is the battleground.

Cost Is Objection

The folks on the other side do not dislike Los Angeles except for the reason that it's on the extreme western side of the U. S. A. Their main objection is not the distance they would have to travel, but the cost of the jaunt—that's the thing.

The U. S. A. squad had to lay out $350,000 to take its full team from New York to Amsterdam. And rich though this country is and generous as are the patrons of sport, vehement and prolonged begging had to be done to raise that $350,000.

It's just as difficult to garner $50,000 by popular subscription in England, France, Finland and other places as it is to pick up $350,000 in this country.

Therefore, when the British, French, Finns, Germans and all others who had planned to send complete teams into the 1932 fray are confronted with raising $550,000 to $600,000 each for a 1932 hop to Los Angeles and back—well, it's obvious what will happen.

Would Take Off Edge

"Even if we could raise the money," is Europe's attitude, "California is too far away. Sending our men across the water will take the edge off them readily enough and land them in New York quite unable to do their best. If we then are forced to ship our men across the American continent on a four or five day trip, they will be in such shape that our chances are ruined even before the games start.

One conspicuous official put it this way:

"If New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore or some Atlantic Seaboard town were to be the scene of battle we would right now promise to send full teams to America in 1932 and take a chance on raising the necessary $350,000 or $400,000. But so far as Los Angeles is concerned—well, we regard it as hopeless for an Olympic battleground, and are in a mood now to say 'no' to any proposition to send a 1932 team."

Will Be Mostly Americans

Inasmuch as Los Angeles is the chosen site for 1932, and because Los Angeles does not seem to be in a mood to relinquish its claims, it does look as if the games four years hence will develop into little other than a "world's championship duel" with few other than American taking part.

But whether it's Los Angeles or somewhere else, it's a cinch that Europe, which hasn't an awful lot of loose cash to toss into Olympic fund coffers, isn't going to be fully represented in the battles of 1932 and so, whether America's team is good, bad or indifferent, it is almost certain to win because the competition it will face will be small in numbers.

In other words, it already can be predicted that the Olympics of 1932 will be a "bust" so far as big European representation is concerned and that the U. S. A. will be victor if for no other reason than that it will have a complete team, whereas the other nations each will send only a handful of performers.

ALTHOUGH several teams have a chance on paper to win the title in the Commercial league the defeat of the Steam Shovel last night by the Eagles practically settled the pennant hope of the lodge and preparations are being made for the opening of the title world series on Sept. 4.

However, the Eagles did not win last night's game without a struggle. After the first inning, in which five runs were scored, the Eagles were held scoreless. The Shovels managed to obtain one runs off Bacon in the second frame.

Three hits, a base on balls and two errors settled the contest in the first frame. With bases filled an error at third started the landslide and as a result five runs crossed the plate before three outs could be made. After that frame hits were mighty scarce for the victors.

Three contests were played last night. The Erie Clerks and Isaly Dairy teams won on forfeits from the Yardmen and Baptists. The Kappas showed their fraternity brothers how the thing was done and blanked the Marion Stars, 9 to 0. The Kiwanis-Silk Mill nine stepped up a notch by whitewashing the K. of P., 7 to 0.

Two contests are scheduled for tonight in the Industrial league. Fairfield will play Osgood at Central while the Shovels tackle the Hocking Valleys at the Shovel.

CHICAGOANS FAVORED TO WIN TOURNAMENT

British Walker Cup Team Members Beaten in Western Amateur

Chicago, Aug. 23—The odds were five to three today that a Chicagoan would win the coveted western amateur golf championship. These figures were based on the fact that five of the eight players, still in the competition today, hail from the metropolitan area of Chicago. Portland, Ore., has two chances in eight, and Quincy, Ill., has the other.

One shocking upset after another marked the progress of yesterday's first and second match play rounds. The first match of the day saw the defending title-holder, Ron Stein of Seattle, succumb to Gus Novotny of Chicago. Thence followed a surprising route of popular favorites.

Not a single member of the British Walker cup team survived the devastating first round matches. Four of them had qualified. John Dawson, the brilliant medalist, fell before Kenneth Hiserl, a fellow Chicagoan, and Don Moe of Portland, Ore., who set a course record of 69 in a qualifying round, lost dismally to C. L. Weems, mayor of Quincy, Ill.

Helen Refuses to Play in Double Header of Tourney

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 23—It took some vigorous foot stamping by Helen Wills and Mrs. May Sutton Bundy to let the officials of the U. S. L. T. A. know that after all the women's national lawn tennis championships which were interrupted by the rain at Forest Hills yesterday were primarily designed to furnish a test of playing superiority and not for the purpose of filling the coffers of the association with gold.

Which explains why the women's championships of this year of grace will follow the east-west matches in the financial statement of the association as a "flop" because the foot stamping of the present champion and the 1901 champion was what killed the association's hopes for a big Saturday "gate" in spite of the fact that rain washed out yesterday's play. The more enthusiastic financial hounds of the association had worked up a fine plan to have a "double header" today beginning at 10 o'clock this morning and this would still have made it possible to hold the "finals" on Saturday with promise of a big "gate."

But with the foremost players in the title series refusing to go on any four-a-day schedule such as the double header would entail, the visions of having the finals on Saturday faded and Monday was selected as the day when the deciding matches will be played, provided always, of course, that another deluge does not interfere with the program and necessitate further postponements as was the case last year.

Therefore, because of yesterday's rain and the successful rebellion of the players, today will see the same set up of matches as was planned for yesterday.

BILL TILDEN WILL BE "OUT OF CITY" WHEN CASE IS BROUGHT UP

Long Denial of Charges Sent by Tennis Star to Collom

NEW YORK, Aug. 23—No prisoner will be in the dock tomorrow when the case of the United States Lawn Tennis Association vs. William T. Tilden, goes to bar, for Tilden has notified Samuel Collom, president of the association, that business will force him to be out of the city when his case is called.

But to offset any notion that he is running away from trouble by refusing to appear before the executive committee which is to hear the charges against him, "Big Bill" has sent to Collom, a thousand word denial of the charges that he violated the amateur code of the association by writing his now famous Wimbledon stories and anyway, he says, in effect—"even if I did violate the code, I haven't received my pay check for the job yet and if it will help matters any, I guarantee not to accept the check when and if it ever is sent to me."

Facetious minded persons dubbed "Big Bill's" defense "Tilden's lament" for instead of a defense it has all the earmarks of a plea of confession and avoidance with his denial of the charges standing on technical grounds only for the purpose of putting the case in issue.

CARDS NOT SLATED AS NEW YORK PLAYS TWO AT PITTSBURG

Five Clubs in Thick of National Race as Reds, Cubs Win

BY LES CONKLIN

NEW YORK, Aug. 23 — The national league race is getting so close these days that [illegible] are forced to work in sets of [illegible] ures to determine who is [illegible] league, unless the New York G[illegible] take both ends of a double [illegible] Pittsburgh today, they will [illegible] lead to the Cardinals, who are [illegible] afternoon. If the Giants [illegible] Pirates break even, the [illegible] standing of the two leaders will [illegible] St. Louis .596, New York .576.

Both the Giants and the Cards yesterday, but the fifth-place P[illegible] won and advanced to within two [illegible] of New York. OLD GOLD bats 1000% as Hornsby takes the Blindfold cigarette test

ROGERS HORNSBY . . . capable manager of the Boston Braves . . . captain of the 1927 New York Giants . . . manager of the 1926 St. Louis Cardinals, who won the World's Series.

Mr. Hornsby was asked to smoke each of the four leading brands, clearing his taste with coffee between smokes. Only one question was asked . . . "Which one do you like best?"

"They say 'there's not a cough in a carload' of OLD GOLDS.

"But I can tell you there's a home-run hit in every cool mouthful.

"For no other cigarette, of the four leading brands in the blindfold test, could compare with OLD GOLDS for pure pleasure to taste, tongue and throat."

Rogers Hornsby

What gives OLD GOLD this winning charm?

Here is the answer, in three words...heart-leaf tobacco. No coarse, heavy top-leaves of the tobacco plant...for they irritate the throat. No withered ground-leaves...for they are lacking in aroma. Only the cool and fragrant heart-leaves ...golden ripe...can give OLD GOLDS their honey-like smoothness. That's why you can tell them in the dark.

GENE'S PERSONALITY REMAINS BEHIND TO BAFFLE ALL WRITERS

Change Noted in Attitude of Sport Editors Toward Tunney

New York, Aug. 23—That strange, indefinable figure of a man, James Joseph Tunney, is stalking at the moment of stage into the wings, a retired [illegible], and as he goes, the mystery of his personality remains unsolved. He has presented his act for all the world to see and, having seen, the world knows as much as it did at the start—to be exact, nothing.

It has pleased the reportorial whim somewhat maudlin at the moment of Tunney's exit. The boys have gushed over sentimentalities in effusive sentences as they discuss the event [illegible] now. Once, and not so long ago, they disliked him with great cordiality. Why a change so marked?

Tunney the Same

The change has been strictly on the part of the sport reporters. Gene Tunney hasn't altered by an eighth inch. He wouldn't if he could and the fact makes it can't make the situation all the more concrete. His is a personality so strong, so deeply set and [illegible], that it couldn't be uprooted by an emotional earthquake.

The boys, therefore, either were wrong before or they are wrong now. They are not wrong, however, in one particular. They have hailed him as a great fighter and the chances are he is. There are some things he can't do—for instance, if the Heeney fight proved anything, it proved that Tunney can't hit in the sense that Dempsey can hit—but there are so many other things he does extraordinarily well that the measure of greatness is [illegible] not too far from its [illegible]. Yes, Tunney can fight and that circumstance affords one of the many [illegible] that surround this strange personality. A great fighter and yet in no sense, in word and in gesture he [illegible] his profession in every possible way. Only a Tunney word can describe Tunney himself. He is an aesthete.

And an aesthete is about everything a typical fighter isn't. They haven't a thing in common—except in the person of James Joseph Tunney. For [illegible] though his every tendency may be, he is as staunch a fighting figure in action as the prize ring has had in years.

A Camp Incident

An incident that occurred in his training camp at Lake Villa, where he trained for the second Dempsey fight, is an apt illustraton of this point. Jack Sharkey, heavyweight product of the hard boiled environment of the U. S. Navy was "experting" one of Tunney's workouts, and, in this capacity, strolled up for a chat with the champion after the day's training was over.

"It's hot, ain't it?" observed Mr. Sharkey in a companionable spirit.

"Positively humid," said Mr. Tunney. It was a neat phrase but he didn't like it, so he tried again.

"Intolerable!"

This was better but not quite good enough.

"Stifling!"

That one decided the matter then and there. Mr. Sharkey gave Mr. Tunney a startled glance and walked away, muttering. Later, he recounted the circumstance with something of a sneer. No doubt about it, Mr. Sharkey was the tough guy of the two—conversationally.

In the ring? That would be different, very different. Mr. Tunney probably would out-tough him from the opening bell.

PAY 30 PER CENT

Referee In Bankruptcy Makes Report To Court

Cincinnati, Aug. 23—Of the $1,563,261.46 unsecured claims against the bankrupt brokerage firm of Beazell and Chatfield which failed for almost $2,000,000 in 1922, filed and proven in federal court here, slightly over 30 per cent or $473,884.80 had been paid today, referee in bankruptcy Charles T. Greve's report showed.

Bankruptcy proceedings against the firm were started in 1922. As a result of the failure of the brokerage house George H. Beazell and William H. Chatfield were tried and convicted by the state. They were released by pardon from the Ohio penitentiary Aug. 15, 1928.

Convinced That New Konjola Is A Real Medicine

"Every Meal Meant Misery To Me," Says This Barber.

MR. JOHN TOSCON

The sufferer who always takes something to settle his meals or force digestion, knows he is not getting permanent relief from his stomach troubles. Konjola conquers that sour, gassy condition after meals and restores the stomach to a more healthy state.

Just recently Mr. John Toscon, a well-known barber of Steubenville, Ohio, living at 601 Washing St., that city, said, "Every meal meant misery to me until I started taking Konjola and now I can enjoy eating anything I want.

"I never had a medicine before that gave me such quick relief from stomach trouble I had been suffering for the last few years. Why, the first bottle ended those terrible indigestion pains and attacks of gas bloating I had after every meal. As I continued with a few more bottles of this Konjola, all the miserable symptoms left me entirely and now I can eat a hearty meal and feel no distress afterward. I also sleep better at night and have more energy during the day. I am convinced that Konjola is a real medicine and feel I am doing a good turn every time I recommend it to someone who suffers."

Konjola is different than any other known remedy in this section. It contains twenty-two juices extracted from natural plants which invigorate the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, to a more healthy action. The effect of Konjola on the entire system brings amazing relief in cases of suffering that had been going on for years. At the same time many weak and rundown systems have been restored to a new state of health through this compound. Such a vast number of men and women in this city have told of their experience with this new medical product until now Konjola is the most highly endorsed medicine that is known in this vicinity.

Konjola is strongly recommended here in Marion at Stump & Sons Pharmacy, and is also being sold by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this section.—Adv.

Severe Case All Over Her Body, But Now She Is Better

Here is just another case of how Peterson's Ointment conquers the terrible itching of eczema after other treatments had failed.

The same kind of a story comes from all over the country. After others fail Peterson's Ointment succeeds.

This letter from Charlotte Brandeau, of Swansea, Mass., is worth reading: "I used Peterson's Ointment and soap for a very severe case of eczema. It was all over my body. I have tried many things to cure it, but not one of them gave me a cure. I saw the ad of Peterson's Ointment in the Fall River Herald and now I am better. I do not go without your ointment and soap in the house, and recommend it very much."

DISCREDIT STORY

Hardin County Coroner Finds Sweater Instead of Baby in Embers

Kenton, Aug. 23—Belief that the body of a baby might have been burned in a bundle placed in a culvert, southwest of the city, was discredited by R. G. Schutte, Hardin county coroner, following examination of charred embers of the package. His examination, he said, failed to disclose any definite evidence that the body of a baby or flesh of any kind had been burned.

County officials started an investigation after a farmer living in the vicinity had reported that a couple had burned the bundle inside the iron culvert and he believed the body of an infant had been burned. The charred embers, according to officials, were of a woolen knit sweater.

Action Follows Filing of Petition for Transfer to Ashley School District

Mt. Gilead, Aug. 23—R. F. Mosher, president of the Morrow County Board of Education, and Charles Long, a board member, are now checking the official list of qualified voters of the White school district in Westfield township following the filing of a petition for transfer into the Ashley school district for school purposes at the last meeting of the board. It is expected that the transfer will be effected if there are 75 per cent of the voters there in favor of such action.

Easier Money, Liberal Buying Make Stock Market Buoyant

G. M. C., CHRYSLER LEAD MOTOR FIELD

Call Loans Rules at Seven Per Cent; Banks Loosen Up

PREDICT BETTER SHOWING

Accessory Stocks in Good Demand; Price Trend Higher

BY W. S. COUSINS
U. P. & N. S. Financial Editor

N. Y., Aug. 23—An easier tone in the money market, together with active work and liberal buying of active stocks by outside traders served to make a buoyant stock market today. Despite heavy profit-taking the trend of prices was highly favorable, the motor stocks leading the way. General Motors and Chrysler joined the motors, U. S. Steel and the steel shares and American Can was at the head of brilliant gains in the copper, the industrial and business shares, the developments of the day were favorable. The so-called business indices of the principal economic agencies show a continuous expansion in general production, in the month just to the same period last year. Construction was the rule and sales resistance the big handicap.

It is now evident that the key industries of steel manufacturing, motor car and building construction will make a better showing than last year. Call money ruled at seven per cent, with bankers inclined to loosen the purse strings.

General Motors' leadership in the forward movement of the motor stocks was again an important feature of the activities of the day. Buying, attributed to powerful financial interests, including Raskob and Kenny, leading Democratic boosters of the Smith candidacy, forced the price back to 190, which compares with last week's break to 170½. Chrysler, Studebaker, Nash and Packard were held back by profit-taking in the forenoon, but developed strength as the session advanced, and moved up brilliantly to the best prices of the week. The motor accessory stocks were in good demand, with Stewart Warner above 94 in recognition also of its success in the radio field.

TODAY'S REVIEW OF YESTERDAY'S MARKET

Chicago, Aug. 23—An extremely nervous tone was apparent in the wheat market yesterday and the quick response of prices to bullish incentive was suggestive of an oversold condition in the pit. Prices went higher early on forecasts of frost for Canada, then went lower at mid-session. However, short covering brought a sharp rally near the close and final quotations showed net advances for the day of 1 6@1¼c.

The corn market still displayed by its price action the unsettled conditions in the present corn situation. Prices were lower early and then went higher finishing with moderate gains of ⅝@⅞c. Oats closed ½@⅝c up and rye ½@¾c lower.

Commission house buying and short covering caused wheat to strengthen after an easier opening and prices went moderately higher. Most of this early buying was based on forecasts for local frosts in parts of Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Selling Not As Heavy

With the early disposition to buy there was a noticeable lightening of selling from all sources, particularly in hedging pressure. Higher prices, however, attracted more offers which accounted for the mid-session slump.

Late short covering which again carried prices moderately higher than the previous close, causing them to finish at the high points for sold condition in the pit. This, in the face of the forecasts for frosts the day, was attributed to the over and a more bullish aspect in the foreign news led shorts to contract their lines for the overnight period.

While no actual business was uncovered at the seaboard, there were several indications of a better demand to come from Europe. There was buying of the futures at times by houses with eastern and seaboard connections and Europeans crop news was less favorable.

An estimate of the French wheat crop places the yield at 39,000,000 to 78,000,000 bu less than a year ago when imports totaled 45,000,000 bu. Cables from Russia said that millers may be forced to mix a certain percentage of corn and barley with their bread grains this year.

Cars Start Unsettled

Prices in the cash wheat market were unchanged to 2c lower and the basis was ½c higher to 2c lower. Local shipping sales were 7,000 bu and sale to go to store, 10,000 bu.

Despite the uneasiness in the May, [illegible] number corn delivery of delivered [illegible] terms held to their narrow range. [illegible] in this grain was less active and [illegible] by of a local character. Weather [illegible] tions continue generally fair, [illegible] there are a few reports of [illegible] by excess rain in some [illegible] tion.

Say Airplane to Dictate All Future Architecture

Urbana-Champaign, Ill, Aug. 23 — Architecture of the future will be governed more by the increasing use of the airplane than by any other one factor.

This is the opinion voiced today by Prof. L. H. Provine, head of the department of architecture of the University of Illinois here. The view of Professor Provine is based on the demand the airplane makes for sufficient space for both handling and taking off.

"In spite of the fact that automobiles are becoming more numerous every day, modern architecture will not be affected by them nearly as much as by the airplane," Provine said.

Automobile Problem

"Parking of automobiles is one of the great problems of the architect in planning a new building today. It is a real problem. While the ramp system where the cars are transported from floor to floor up and down inclined driveways, is in favor at present, these ramps take up so much valuable space that it may become impracticable to use them in the future except in garage buildings. The cost of elevators is high, both in respect to initial installation and operation, yet they do conserve space and their value may become greater. Elevators are slow, however, in handling automobiles during rush hours.

"On the other hand, with the increase in the use of airplanes by private individuals for business and pleasure, by corporations for the transportation of light deliveries, and the mail and express trains, something must be done to facilitate their landing almost at will. The tops of buildings are the logical place in crowded cities for the landing stages, because in this day of great speed distance from the landing field to the center of the business district must be cut as much as possible. Therefore, it would seem that the tops of buildings that today are just so much waste space must be utilized for this purpose.

Landing Fields

"The cost of building landing fields on the tops of buildings will not be great. A certain amount of zoning in the downtown sections will secure a certain amount of uniformity in the heights of buildings so that their tops will be of the same level. With a stretch of roof height of even elevation, the cost of building a landing field would not be great. The construction of the buildings to hold up the field would not be expensive, nor would the building footings need be materially increased in size.

"The platforms would in all probability be constructed at a uniform height for a given locality depending upon the nature of the businesses housed within the area involved. Also streets can be bridged at the roof lines of adjoining buildings thus permitting runways of any desired length" he concluded.

Kansas City Girls Hit New Scheme To Foil Lotharios

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 23—"The auto-sheik," pernicious bug found in abundance in America's one horse towns, and which like the less harmful firefly operates chiefly after dark, has met his match in Kansas City. The two fair conquerors who have devised a scheme to outwit the "Lizzie Lotharios" gladly offered to disclose their find to their persecuted sisters throughout this land of bell-bottoms and vaseline pompadours.

Watch the two canny Kansas Cityettes in action—

The scene: Main Street in the downtown section.

The Time: Midnight.

The Characters: Two of those lovely creatures of the type that you can always just fail to muster up enough courage to speak to.

Enters Villians

Enter the first set of villians. They are youthful, yet they are wicked and they are mounted on the front, in fact the only seat, of a dilapidated flivver, which has seen better nights.

First villain in a shrill tenor that has little hope of ever growing into a base—"Hie thee hence fair ones. Mount with us upon our noble steed and let Papa deliver you to your respective domiciles.

First Coquette, (holding a lily white finger to rosy red lips, and expressing as much alarm as a pair of china blue eyes and a round doll face are capable.) "Sh-hhh. Everybody'll see use get in here. Drive down to Twenty-fourth and Main and wait for us there."

First set of villains in chorus and to the accompaniment of the grinding gears. "Cherrio—we shall meet you there."

Enter second set of villians, sniffing disdainfully of the exhaust pipe smells left by first set of villians.

They would be laughing up their coat sleeves at the apparent chagrin of their predecessors only the second set of villians do not wear coats. They are older villans, smug villians, regular villian" villians. They have a big blue racer).

"C'mon girls hop in and we'll take you for a spin."

First Coquette (again doing her stuff—"Twenty-fifth and Main—on the northwest corner—it's dark down there and nobody'll see us get in."

Villains Depart

Second set of villains exit with flourish of klaxons.

A street car rumbles up and the two girls enter. At Twenty-fourth and Main two expectant voices treble, "Here we are."

Two icy stares.

At Twenty-fifth and Main—from the shadows of the northwest corner, "Here we are girls."

Two equally frigid looks.

"Really girls," this from an oldish, fatherly looking man who is sitting in an opposite seat and who has watched the episode from the first, "Really girls—how do you do it."

The stares thaw and there are two giggles of relief. "Well you see, Mr., Gertie and I work down town with late hours and we had an awful time with these steering gear shieks until we figured out this scheme. On moonlight nights we sometimes have them lined up all the way to Fiftieth Street.

DEFEATED PRIMARY CANDIDATE SOUGHT

A. D. McIvain Accused of Issuing Worthless Checks, Officers Report

Andrew D. McIlvain, defeated Democratic candidate for nomination for state representative from Marion county, is sought by police and sheriff officials here following the filing of warrants against him in municipal and probate court.

The warrants filed in municipal court charge McIlvain with passing worthless checks.

A lunacy warrant was filed in probate court by Clara B. McIlvain, wife of the defeated candidate.

Police and sheriff officials have been unable to locate McIlvain to serve the warrants. He is said to have disappeared from the city the day following the primary election on Aug. 14.

McIlvain issued the worthless checks to persons assisting him in his campaign, it is charged.

McIlvain ran last in a field of four Democratic candidates for the nomination. He received only 148 votes in the entire county.

FIND MONSTER BONES

The latter structure is 792 feet high. The monster which the Andrews party refers to could easily have gobbled a half-dozen elephants in a single bite.

"WILD WEST" FATAL

Boy Points "Unloaded" Gun, Brother Is Shot

Lima, Aug. 23—Because a toy gun was not realistic enough in the "wild-west" game he was playing, Sylvester Brown, 11, obtained his father's .22 caliber rifle and, as a result, his 15-year-old brother Mathias, is dead at Ottawa, near here, today.

The boys had been playing with a toy gun. Tiring of the sham gun, Sylvester procured the "unloaded" weapon, pointed it at Mathias and pulled the trigger.

Mathias dropped with a bullet just below his heart and died a few minutes later.

Coroner P. D. Bixel of Pandora rendered a verdict of accidental death.

PARLIAMENT IS ASKED TO SUPPRESS NOISES

London—"The torture of noise" is the outstanding question of debate in England at the present moment.

A call to Parliament to suppress unnecessary noise, specially at night, will be one of the questions before the assembly of British doctors about to assemble in session at Cardiff.

Doctors who work in large cities are especially concerned about this problem. They say that noise in London is adding to the mortality figures and impairing the working efficiency of hundreds of thousands of people.

It is torturing patients in public and private hospitals, and so serious are the general effects that Professor Henry J. Spooner estimates the loss due to impairment of working capacity at $5,000,000 daily in London alone.

He explains that the strident and deafening noise shocks the auditory nerves and produces fatigue, which turn diminishes the capacity to a greater extent than severe lar exertion.

British doctors, as a whole London to be the noisiest cit world.

FIVE CLEVELANDERS KILLED AT CROSSING

Woman, Two Children and Her Parents Lose Lives in Canada

Cleveland, Aug. 23—Lester Vanderwerf, prominent Cleveland business man, today was enroute by train to Three Rivers, Can., to take charge of the bodies of his two children, his wife, and her parents, all of whom were killed yesterday in a grade crossing near Yamachiche, Quebec.

The dead are: Mrs. Vanderwerf; her two children, Jack, 5, and Jean, 2; and her parents, George H. Wise, 60, floor superintendent of the Higbee department store here, and his wife. Mrs. Lola Doty, sister of Mrs. Wise, was seriously injured, but still was alive in a hospital at Three Rivers this morning, according to reports reaching here.

The five lives were snuffed out in an isolated rural section between Quebec and Montreal. The family was vacationing in Canada. Complete details of the tragedy have not yet been received but Mrs. Vanderwerf is believed to have been driving and the party was touring to Quebec, according to reports.

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderlie at night. Next day bright. Get 24 for 25c today at the nearest Rexall Drug Store.—Adv.

FEWER CHILDREN

Birth Rate Decrease in London Is Becoming Alarming

London—London is becoming a place of fewer children.

The London County Council's annual health report has just disclosed that the birthrate has fallen continuously since 1921, and, although the population has remained at about four-and-a-half millions, the proportion of children under 15 years of age has fallen from 30 per cent in 1901 to 20 per cent in 1921—the last census.

"Assuming," says the report, "that the present decrease, both of birth and infant mortality, to continue until after the next census, the children under 15 years of age will then form less than 20 per cent of the total population."

The births during 1927 numbered 73,263, compared with 78,825 in the preceding year. In the last quarter of 1927, the births fell below the previous lowest recorded for this quarter.

The decrease in the number of births in London since 1921 has averaged about 4,000 annually. In 1901, when the population was about the same, the births exceeded those of last year by 57,829.

BUREAUS USE TRUCKS TO HAUL THEIR MONEY

Government Officials Admit They Do What Business Men Told Not To Do

Washington, Aug. 23—Government department heads here have just admitted they have been doing something that police commissioners of cities throughout the country have been advising business houses not to do—carry large payrolls through the streets.

Hundreds of paymasters have been killed in futile attempts to protect their money satchels from bandits. Millions of dollars have been stolen from commercial houses in this manner in the United tates. Still Uncle Sam's paymasters, continued the hazard of carrying their large payrols from thle Treasury Department to their bureaus located in various sections of the capital.

Armed Guards

Accompanied by one or two armed employes, the government executives carried the currency by diverse methods. Some journyed to the office in taxicabs. Some chose private automobiles while the less wary carried their valuable bag on street cars or even walked—a literal invitation for a holdup. Twice a month they made such expeditions.

But now official Washington is going to abide by the unofficial ruling of the police chiefs of the country. They are taking precautions against theft. Being late to recognize the danger of robbery they believe they have gone a step farther in this regard than the commercial houses. They have provided armored trucks, the most modern yet designed, and as "hold-up proof" as an army tank. It would be folly to question its effectiveness in bullet fire.

New Use Trucks

The trucks, two of them were purchased by the Treasury Department for use of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. They have been placed in service to deliver the payrolls to all departments of the government.

The trucks are of two-and-one-half tons and are covered with heavy armor plate. The plate covers both sides and the rear while in the front of the chauffeur and armed guard are protected by bullet-proof glass. There are turret holes for pistol fire from the inside.

The administration hopes to effect a treaty to outlaw war with all nations. But in the capital it has just taken the preliminary steps for a probable battle with payroll bandits.

THE vogue for dots, having spread so extensively, has of course made its appearance on the beach. Rosalie's bathing ensemble is evidence of this. In addition to the portrayal of this, however, her outfit shows another new feature in the adoption of the beret for swimming. And to make one's beach equipment complete, one should have one of the large straw sombreros to wear when sitting on the beach in the sun, especially if, like Rosalie, one is a blonde.

INDIVIDUAL INSTRUCTION IN COLLEGE

You cannot turn out a man as you would an automobile—by machinery. Man is essentially a thinking being, and thinking is primarily an individual process. That is why a junior college provides such a splendid start in the gaining of a liberal education. It can give that careful personal attention from wise teachers which is so necessary in laying the foundation for the student's later specialized interests. The freshman and sophomore years are the years when the student is developing his own ideals for life and his background of general knowledge. Later, when he is drawn into the machinery of the larger institutions, with something akin to the hurry and bustle of a great manufacturing plant, the habit of individual and independent thinking, gained in the early Junior College days will stand him in good stead. Young people at the junior college age have peculiar needs which only such small colleges can provide. For this reason the junior colleges have the support of many of the large institutions of learning, for these realize how impossible it often is, in the crowded conditions of their own underclasses, to give the individual attention the students need.

The Junior College of Urbana University is especially equipped to give that individual care and attention which means so much at the beginning of the college days.

For further information write Urbana University, Urbana, Ohio.—Adv.

D COMPANY TO PRESENT "BAGDAD"

Circus and Fireworks Spectacle Scheduled Here Sept. 17 to 21

Plans have been completed by Company D, 166th Infantry, O. N. G., for presentation of a fireworks spectacle, "Bagdad," Sept. 17-21, inclusive, at Marion county fairgrounds, Capt. John Mason announced today. The program will be given under auspices of the company.

With opening of headquarters at the Pilgrim Inn, a committee on arrangements is preparing to launch a campaign to attract hundreds of out-of-town visitors to the gala event.

"Bagdad," an outdoor fireworks display and circus, will open each evening with a band concert. Circus acts are followed by presentation of a scene from the city of Bagdad.

The dramatic movement of the story is built around Bagdad and tales told in the Arabian nights. The pageantry is ably portrayed by a group of well-known artists, aided by about 200 persons to be chosen from residents of Marion.

One of the performances has been set aside for the free entertainment of crippled children, disabled war veterans, and the poverty stricken in the city, Captain Mason announced.

BROOKHART AND NYE BACK HOOVER STAND

Senator Smith W. Brookhart, the insurgent, who took the stump here for Hoover. This was an interesting development, too, as Brookhart was expelled by his party in the senate a few years ago, for supporting the late Senator Robert M. LaFollette in the 1924 campaign.

"I came away from the conference with Mr. Hoover, convinced of his sincerity in dealing with the farm problem," said Nye. "I feel sure he will devote himself to a solution of the farm problem as the first act of his administration and I am sure he will find a solution. Consequently, I have no hesitancy now in indorsing him and in giving him my support."

The farm leaders were received by Hoover at "Brucemore," the estate of Mrs. George B. Douglas, where he spent the night with his family and a few friends. He walked out on the spacious lawn to talk with them and he allowed them to question him with the frankness of a senate debate. He enjoyed the discussions as much as his visitors.

Hoover heard the acceptance speech of his Democratic rival, Gov. Alfred E. Smith, over the radio at "Brucemore" last night.

A storm in eastern Iowa created so much static that the reception was very poor and Hoover missed parts of the speech.

The action of Smith in proposing a change in the prohibition amendment, to permit state sale of intoxicating beverages, raised prohibition to a major issue, in the opinion of Hoover's advisors.

VIOLATORS DROP

Only Few License Numbers Taken By Local Police

Only a few license numbers of alleged violators of the stop sign ordinance have been collected in various parts of the city during the last two days, according to John H. Powell, clerk in the municipal court. It is believed that no more special sessions of traffic court will be necessary if the decrease continues. Violators reported will be taken care of in the regular session each Friday morning.

Several of those who did not appear yesterday when their names were called in the special court have made their appearance and paid their fines. Seventy-three out of 120 answered when called yesterday by Judge W. R. Martin.

Although the number of violators is on the decrease, police still are keeping up their vigil in the campaign against motorists who fail to observe the stop signs, Chief J. W. Thompson said today.

Sixty-eight tracts of land are involved in one suit and 10 tracts in the other. The majority of the property is located in the Durfee & Copeland addition to the city.

Copeland Quinn and William Quinn as defendants.

According to the petition the plaintiff, as administratrix, owns a five twenty-eighth interest in the real estate involved. The petitions ask the court to appoint a board of commissioners to appraise the property.

AL AWAITS REACTION OF NATION TO TALK

Democratic Nominee Decides To Win or Lose on Sole Dry Issue

permitted to fix its own standard of the alcoholic content of intoxicating beverages, but his speech in formally accepting the presidential nomination marked the first time he ever has declared for a change in the Eighteenth amendment.

In the campaign the governor will take particular pains to point out for the benefit of the south and other dry states that his proposal would preserve for such states the benefit of a national law that would continue to make interstate shipment of liquor a crime. He also will stress the point that these dry states could continue to have federal enforcement of prohibition within their own borders.

To Touch Farm Relief

Naturally when Smith campaigns in the middle western states he will deal extensively in his speeches with farm relief, but there will be no pussy-footing on his part on prohibition, even in the driest of dry states, his close friends declared today. He will tell the farmers that he favors government control of crops surpluses and assessing the cost on the unit benefited, which is the principal of the McNary-Haugen bill, but he also will tell them that if elected he will do everything within his power to bring about a change in the prohibition laws.

Announcement today by Jesse H. Jones, Democratic leader of Texas, that Governor Smith's stand on prohibition "should not be offensive to any fair-minded prohibitionist," was cheerful news for the nominee. The governor is said to feel that when his stand on the wet-dry question is really understood other advocates of prohibition will feel the same way.

To Review Troops

"Governor Smith's views on prohibition were already well known and his program as outlined, while not acceptable to those who disagree with them, should not be offensive to any fairminded prohibitionist for the reason that he makes clear that the president is a law enforcer and not a law maker and that he will enforce the law," Jones wrote in his statement.

Governor Smith and members of his family were to leave for New York today. Tomorrow the governor will go to Spring Lake, N. J., and on Saturday he will review the New Jersey national guard troops at the state camp at Sea Girt.

The governor was keenly disappointed when the notification ceremony had to be shifted from the capitol steps to the assembly chamber because of rain. Less than 2,000 persons saw the governor when he formally launched his campaign for the White House, but seventy million could have listened in on the radio.

20,000 Stand in Rain

A crowd of 20,000 persons, unable to gain admission to the capitol, stood in the rain in Capitol park and listened to the presidential candidate by means of amplifiers.

After the formal ceremony in the assembly chamber, the governor walked down the rain-soaked capitol steps to tell the crowd how sorry he was that the notification had to be held indoors.

Definite plans for the opening of Smith's active campaign are expected to be mapped out in New York early next week at a conference between the governor and John J. Raskob, chairman of the national committee. It is expected Smith's first trip will take him to the Pacific coast.

N. E. A. DIRECTOR SAYS YOUTH "NOT SO HOT"

Sensationalist Responsible for Propaganda, Miss M. M. Alltucker Believes

Berkeley, Calif., Aug. 23—Flaming youth is really "not so hot" considering the complexity of present social and economic life, so says Miss Margaret M. Alltucker, assistant director in the National Education Association of Washington, D. C., here as a member of the summer session faculty at the University of California.

Were it not for the sensationalist, the public never would have heard of flaming youth, she says.

Change in social conditions and standards has necessitated the public schools to assume a greater responsibility for moral growth. And education has borne that responsibility successfully, she believes.

Education today seeks to establish three prerequisites in the development of moral conduct. First it strives to make the child recognize the proper thing when he sees it; second, it seeks to develop the child's ability to do that right thing after he sees it, and third it tries to develop the child's will to do it after he first recognizes it and knows that he can do it.

COMPLETE SKELETON OF ANCIENT HUMAN

Believe Discovery Will Aid Science in Determining Origin of Man

Chicago, Aug. 23—What is possibly the first complete skeleton of ancient man to be found in North Africa was brought to this city by Paul Nesbit, twenty-four year old graduate of the University of Chicago. Nesbit has been in North Africa as head of the Lamm-Nesbit expedition.

The skeleton, found in strata that is dated about 30,000 years ago, will be studied by the university faculty, and is expected to be of great scientific importance in determining questions relating to the origin of man.

Among other discoveries by the expedition is an "immovable". This is a carved ox bed in basalt and some ninety odd flint axes, showing the types of tools used by primitive man, while pictures of the skulls of nearly all races of Africa were found. In addition, the skulls of several animals, including gorilla and chimpanzee, were found.

10 CHINESE SLAIN ON CALIFORNIA RANCH

Motive for Crime Undetermined; Slayer Drives Off in Victim's Car

Fairfield, Cal., Aug. 23—Clubbed, shot and hacked to death, the bodies of 10 Chinese were held in the morgue here today while posses searched the territory between here and Sacramento for their slayer, described as a pock-marked Chinese, apparently about 32 years old. He was known in the colony as Leung Hing.

The motive of the crime has not yet been determined, whether the slayer was actuated by revenge or acted as the hired murderer in a tong war or an opium feud. Another theory advanced was that the slayer suddenly became demented and began his butchery in an insane frenzy.

Six of the dead belong to the family of Wong Gee, who was also murdered. Wong Gee was the leader of the Chinese colony on the Bryan ranch six miles from here.

After his last victim had been shot, Leung Hing climbed into Wong Gee's automobile and drove away towards Sacramento. Leung Hing had been employed on the Bryan ranch for the past five months.

CHARRED BODY GIVES MYSTERY TO INDIANA

Barn Is Burned and Strange Car Is Found in Sheriff's Garage

Angola, Ind., Aug. 23 — A charred body in a burned barn, a strange car surreptitiously placed in the sheriff's own garage, and a $71 filling station holdup were the elements scrambled into a murder mystery that confronted Steuben county authorities here today.

The body, that of a man, was found in the ruins of a barn on the farm of Mrs. Joanna Brickler, four miles west of Fremont. The strange car, a Hudson sedan, with both Indiana and Michigan license plates, was discovered in the garage of Sheriff Charles Zimmerman who was in Portland, Ind., until this morning.

An Angola garage employe came forward with the story of how he was held up, robbed of $71 and taken a mile into the country and ordered to walk back.

Who was the victim? Who set the barn on fire? Who put the car in the sheriff's garage? Who staged the holdup? These were but some of the questions the authorities sought to answer today.

Wilson Duguid, a neighbor, said he saw the barn burning on the Bricker farm early this morning. At dawn he and Dan Stoy and Irvin Bricker investigated the blaze. They were horrified to find a man's skull. Further digging into the ruins showed the remains of the charred body. Six empty shells were found near the body. The only identifying laundry mark found on the dead man's body was the letter "B" on his underwear.

The Smith Acceptance Speech.

"Here in the capitol where twenty-five years ago I came into the service of the state," said Hon. Alfred E. Smith at Albany last night by way of introduction to his speech accepting the Democratic nomination for the presidency, "I receive my party's summons to lead it in the nation. Within this building I learned the principles, the purposes and the functions of government and to know that the greatest privilege that can come to any man is to give himself to a nation which has reared him and raised him from obscurity to be a contender for the highest office in the gift of its people.

"Here I confirmed my faith in the principles of the Democratic party so eloquently defined by Woodrow Wilson. 'First, the people as the source and their interests and desires as the test of laws and institutions. Second, individual liberty as the objective of all law.' With a gratitude too strong for words and with humble reliance upon the aid of Divine Providence, I accept your summons to the wider field of action."

With this indirect reference to his humble origin and the estate to which he has arisen; with this recommitment to the principles of his party, this voicing of the measure of his gratitude and this expression of his reliance upon the aid of Almighty God, the nominee proceeded with what, we believe, will be very generally held to be not only an able acceptance speech, but also one shrewdly designed to make a strong appeal.

"Government should be constructive," said Candidate Smith, "not destructive; progressive, not reactionary," and he expressed himself as entirely unwilling to accept the old order of things as the best unless and until he became convinced that it can not be made better. Citing that the New world theory is that government exists for the people as against the Old world theory that the people exist for the government, he held that a sharp line separates those who believe that an elect class should be the special object of the government's concern and those who believe that the government is the agent and servant of those who created it, and he charged that of the former class are those dominant in the opposition party today. "It is a fallacy," he said, "that there is inconsistency between progressive measures protecting the rights of the people, including the poor and the weak, and a just regard for the rights of legitimate business, great or small. Therefore, while I emphasize my belief that legitimate business promotes the national welfare, let me warn the forces of corruption and favoritism, that Democratic victory means that they will be relegated to the rear and the front seats will be occupied by the friends of equal opportunity."

Expressing the belief that government policy should spring from the deliberate action of an informed electorate, the nominee promised, if elected ,to strive "to make the nation's policy the true reflection of the nation's ideals."

Taking up the tariff, Governor Smith said "the Democratic party does not and under my leadership will not advocate any sudden or drastic revolution in our economic system which would cause business upheaval and popular distress. This principle was recognized as far back as the passage of the Underwood tariff bill. Our platform restates it in unmistakable language. The Democratic party stands squarely for the maintenance of legitimate business and a high standard of wages for American labor. Both can be maintained and at the same time the tariff can be taken out of the realm of politics and treated on a strictly business basis."

Considering the matter of foreign relations, Governor Smith voices censure of the present administration's course in Nicaragua and made this commitment of policy:

"To no declaration of our platform do I more heartily commit myself than the one for the abolition of the practice of the president of entering into agreements for the settlement of internal disputes in Latin-American countries, unless the agreements have been consented to by the senate as provided for in the constitution of the United States. I personally declare what the platform declares: 'Interference in the purely internal affairs of Latin-American countries must cease' and I specifically pledge myself to follow this declaration with regard to Mexico as well as the other Latin-American countries.

"The Monroe doctrine must be maintained, but not as a pretext for meddling with the purely local concerns of countries which even though they be small are sovereign and entitled to demand and receive respect for their sovereignty. And I shall certainly do all that lies in my power to bring about the fullest concerted action between this country and all the Latin-American countries with respect to any step which it may ever be necessary to take to discharge such responsibilities to civilization as may be placed upon us by the Monroe doctrine."

The two subjects to which the Democratic nominee gave the greatest attention, and which probably are of the greatest general interest, were prohibition and farm relief. The president, he said, has two constitutional duties with respect to prohibition. The first is faithfully to execute the office of president and to preserve, protect and defend the constitution, and he promised to make an honest endeavor to enforce the eighteenth amendment and all other provisions of the federal constitution and all laws enacted pursuant thereto.

"The second constitutional duty imposed upon the president is 'To recommend to the congress such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient.' Opinion upon prohibition cuts squarely across the two great political parties. There are thousands of so-called 'wets and drys' in each. The platform of my party is silent upon any question of change in the law. I personally believe that there should be change and I shall advise the congress in accordance with my constitutional duty of whatever change I deem 'necessary or expedient.' It will then be for the people and the representatives in the national and state legislatures to determine whether these changes shall be made. * * * Some immediate relief would come from an amendment to the Volstead law giving a scientific definition of the alcoholic content of an intoxicating beverage. The present definition is admittedly inaccurate and unscientific. Each state would then be allowed to fix its own standard of alcoholic content, subject always to the proviso that that standard could not exceed the maximum fixed by the congress.

"I believe, moreover, that there should be submitted to the people the question of some change in the provisions of the eighteenth amendment. Certainly, no one foresaw when the amendment was ratified the conditions which exist today of bootlegging, corruption and open violation of the law in all parts of the country. The people themselves should after this eight years of trial, be permitted to say whether existing conditions should be rectified. I personally believe in an amendment in the eighteenth amendment which would give to each individual state itself only after approval by a referendum popular vote of its people the right wholly within its borders to import, manufacture or cause to be manufactured and sell alcoholic beverages, the sale to be made only by the state itself and not for consumption in any public place."

Stating that the farm debt had increased from $1,009,000,000 in 1910 to $14,000,000,000 at the present time, while the value of farm property between 1910 and 1925 had decreased $20,000,000,000, Governor Smith took up the matter of farm relief and dwelt at great length upon the importance of agriculture, what agriculture means financially to the country and the need of immediate relief for the farmers of the land. He held that cooperative, coordinated control and marketing and warehousing of surplus farm products is essential just as coordinated, cooperative control of the flow of capital was found necessary to the regulation of our country's finances, and pledged every effort for early relief.

The governor spoke for better distribution by increased efficiency of railroad transportation and terminal handling, for the encouragement of the use of highways for short hauls of small-bulk commodities. He stressed the importance of inland waterways and urged the opening of a direct water route from the Middle West to the Atlantic. He favored flood control and commended the plan of the Reid-Jones bill for control of the waters of the Mississippi. The greater conservation of natural resources was held desirable and, scoring public utility propaganda, he demanded that the public ownership and control of water power must be preserved. He favored a joint commission of representatives of all the states interested for the regulation of the waters of the Colorado river. The operation of Muscle Shoals by the government was advocated as was also reforestation and the conservation of national parks.

Governor Smith paid high tribute to organized labor, scoring the abuse of injunctions in labor disputes, and promised sympathetic interest in the advancement of protective legislation for working men and women. He stood behind the present immigration law, save that he would amend it that families might not be separated and that quotas be fixed on some later basis than the census of 1890.

"While this is a government of laws and not of men, laws do not execute themselves," the nominee said in closing. "We must have people of character and outstanding ability to serve the nation. To me one of the greatest elements of satisfaction in my nomination is the fact that I owe it to no one man or set of men. I can with complete honesty make the statement that my nomination was brought about by no promise given or implied by me or any one in my behalf. I will not be influenced in appointments by the question of a person's wet or dry attitude, by whether he is rich or poor, whether he comes from the north, south, east or west, or by what church he attends in the worship of God. The sole standard of my appointments will be the same as they have been in my governorship—integrity of the man or woman and his or her ability to give me the greatest possible aid in devoted service to the people."

The candidate of the party not in power has this advantage over his opponent; he can point out the mistakes which are inevitable to any administration, regardless of party, and ascribe to the opposition any ill or ills from which the country may have been or may be suffering. The New York governor took advantage of this situation to the utmost. In fact, some may hold that he weakened his case by going too far in this respect. But aside from this, it will be conceded that the governor's address was a very frank, honest presentation of his views alike upon national and international affairs. His exposition of his stand on prohibition was frank in the extreme, going far beyond the declarations of his party in its platform.

JUST ONE THING AFTER ANOTHER.

Full Eight Hours in Bed Right.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

What would you think of a transcontinental railroad which undertook to drive a train across North America without changing engines? If you had plenty of time it might be done, but I venture to say it would require two or three weeks to make the trip. One time I crossed from Chicago to the Pacific coast and, if I remember correctly, we changed engines twenty-four times. There was a strike on the road and the engines were in bad condition. A few hours would put the imperfectly repaired machine out of business.

There must be intervals for cooling off, for oiling and the making of minor repairs. Without them, the engine becomes so seriously out of order that it cannot proceed at all.

These intervals in the use of a machine compare with the periods of rest and sleep required in the life of a living machine. Without the restoration and repair accomplished by these restful periods, there could be no continued activity on the part of the strongest of men and women.

The nervous system is a delicate and complicated mechanism. It is far more sensitive, more liable to get out of order, and more susceptible to serious disturbance than any machine made by man. It should be as well treated, certainly, as a railroad locomotive.

For myself I know that I must have sleep. I can get along without food, but without abundant sleep my work becomes unsatisfactory to me. Of course, I can speak for nobody else, but for me, I know I must have plenty of sleep if I am to do my best work.

Just how many hours of sleep you need depends on your particular make-up. Napoleon got along with five hours or less, but most of us require much more. The average grown person needs about eight hours. Children must have more.

The sleeping-room should be dark, quiet, cool, and well-aired. The bed covering should be just enough to furnish comfort. If it is too heavy the sleep is restless and unrefreshing.

"Change of work is rest," is an old saying and a true one. Make it a point to get some recreation and a change from your usual duties. The tired part of your nervous system is being rested when you are using some other portion of it.

Sleep and rest are essential to your happiness. You can not be successful in your undertakings and safe from the invasion of disease if you neglect them.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES.

R.B.F. Q—Would a sharp pain in the arm and around the heart, accompanied by a feeling of weakness, indicate anything serious?

A—May be due to a heart condition or to neuritis, due to some infection in the system. Have your heart examined first of all and then definite treatment can be advised.

* * *

J.V. Q—What do you advise for stuttering? My little son four years old stutters very badly.

2—What should I do when I notice myself taking cold?

A—Try to make the little fellow talk slowly and do not excite him. This is a nervous condition and by careful training he will probably outgrow it. If in a few years he has not improved it might be wise to consult the local board of education for information concerning classes for speech defect.

2—Consult a physician.

Editorial Opinion.

THE COME-BACK OF VENIZELOS.

In view of his wide renown as a statesman, the electoral victory won by Premier Eleutherios Venizelos, of Greece, becomes an event of international interest. This does not mean that the Venizelist party obtained its triumph at the polls on any issue of strictly international significance.

For years, ever since Venizelos during the war engaged in combat with the dynasty, the outstanding problem in Greek politics has been that of the future constitutional system of the country. After the fortunes of the battle between republicanism and royalism have so long hung in the balance, it is impossible to predict anything as to the permanency or otherwise of the latest Venizelist success. But it may safely be said that the size of the premier's majority over the royalists indicates his almost complete return to popularity. Only two years ago, upon his reentry into politics after a self-imposed exile, the chances of anything like as full a come-back seemed meager indeed.

Even today, back as he is in the saddle at Athens, with a strong parliamentary support to count upon, Venizelos seems undecided in his attitude toward the constitutional question. Presumably he still entertains some of his earlier doubts and misgivings as to whether his country is ripe for republican self-government. In the bitterest days of his struggle with King Constantine, it must be remembered, Venizelos did not fight monarchy as an institution. He fought Constantine as a man standing in the way of a military alliance by Greece with the western powers.

It will be interesting to see whether now, with a strengthened grip on the destinies of his country, Venizelos will throw his prestige and influence to republicanism or advocate a compromise with monarchy.—Detroit Free Press.

VISCOUNT HALDANE.

For no just or adequate reason Viscount Haldane of Cloan was generally hated by his fellow-countrymen during the years of the late war. Haldane was an intense admirer of Germany and of all things German.

"Germany," said Lord Haldane, "is my spiritual home." Yet with all this intense affection for Germany there is no proof that he ever wavered in his loyalty to his own land.

Indeed, it was in considerable measure due to Haldane's work as secretary of state for war that the British army was reorganized and made more effective for the conflict with Germany. A few month's after the outbreak of the war he was forced out of office because of his Germanophile utterances.

Perhaps the greatest offense of the late statesman in the eyes of many Englishmen was his forsaking of the Liberal party in 1921 and his acceptance of a post in the Labor government of Ramsay MacDonald. Men who fought in the war felt that this elevation of the "pro-German" was MacDonald's greatest mistake, and of all the MacDonald coterie Haldane was subjected to the most vitriolic attacks.

It was probably a grievous blunder for Haldane to return to public life. It stirred old animosities which were in the way of being forgotten.

If Haldane was as pro-German as his enemies have always declared he was academically, sentimentally or theoretically pro-German. Actually he was pro-British. The charge that he was a "defeatist" during the actual period of the war has never been substantiated. What he did and said before and after the actual period of the war is of minor consequence.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Look Inside.

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS

Dr. Victor Pietschmann, of the Vienna Museum of Natural History, advocates the use of X-ray photography, on a scale and in a manner not hitherto undertaken, for the study of the internal organization of animals and plants. He has recently applied this method, through the cooperation of the Queen's hospital and the Bishop Museum of Honolulu, and finds his anticipations realized by intrarecording pictures of fishes, and from his descriptions one would be led to expect an immense advance in physiological and biological knowledge through a general adoption of his plan.

The object is not to trace the marks of internal disease, but to obtain photographs of the interior structure of animals in full health, showing every bone, even the smallest, exactly in its natural place with reference to the rest of the skeleton and the soft parts of the body. More than this, by means of injections into the heart and the larger vessels photographs of the capillary vessels may be obtained which are clear in the minutest detail. In a similar way the forms and natural positions of other internal cavities may be pictured Dr. Pietschmann says he knows a distinguished scientist whose studies of the human heart demanded years of his time. One of these X-ray pictures would have shortened the length of the investigation to a few hours.

It is probable that a careful development of the art of "roentgenography" will render it possible to picture in detail the arrangement of the softer parts of the body, for Dr. Pietschmann remarks that even in the ordinary X-ray picture the soft parts appear on the negative with varying degrees of intensity. The air bladder of fishes, for instance, appears very clear and sharply defined, especially if the photograph is made soon after the death of the animal.

In his work at Hawaii, Dr. Pietschmann was able in a short time to obtain X-ray representations of the internal structure of the majority of the Hawaiian fishes, an undertaking that would have consumed years by the ordinary methods of dissection, without producing equally accurate results in the end.

The study of the skeletons of fossilized animals, especially fishes, is likewise facilitated and improved in accuracy by the use of roentgenography. A curious revealing effect is produced by such photographs, through the suggestion which they give of the complete form of the fish when clothed with its flesh. "An X-ray picture," says Dr. Pietschmann, "resembles a fossil much more than a skeleton without any of the soft parts could possibly do. While these parts are rather dim on the negative, they are sharply circumscribed and remind one of the shape of the fossilized animal, whose outlines and soft parts of the body can only be distinguished by a discoloration of the stone"—in which the fossil was embedded.

The method applies as well in the study of plants. In many biological researches "a picture may save months of painstaking technical work, while for students it would save the laborious work of microtomy and the subsequent reconstruction of organs from sections. By this method many a valuable organism can be kept intact that otherwise would have to be sacrificed for the purpose of study."

Thus science makes the invisible seeable, and lifts the veil from that which is hidden. —Copyright, 1928, International Feature Service, Inc.

Land Ship Not a Mirage.

BY TEMPLE MANNING.

We were getting impatient to get a glimpse of the quaint old spires and roofs of Antwerp, ancient city of the Flemings, for the long journey up the river Scheldt soon becomes a bit monotonous, when suddenly an Atlantic liner appeared on our starboard side.

It was something new and binoculars were soon getting her within range. Then a gasp of astonishment went up.

She was sailing on dry land!

It was uncanny, like some huge stage conjuring trick. There were the flat, peaceful green meadows, the windmills and funny Dutch farms, and calmly steaming through them a twenty-thousand ton passenger ship!

But like many another phenomenon this has a simple explanation. You see, the Scheldt winds and twists like a giant serpent, and at this spot it makes a complete letter "S" bend. The land between each side creates the illusion of ships sailing on land.

You get the same picture in the city of Antwerp, itself. For the ships sail right into the streets along the canals which bisect the town. There you have the sight of motor buses, automobiles, and people waiting on a street which has suddenly opened a section of itself to admit a steamer.—Copyright, 1928, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

New York, Aug. 23—It has become a stunt this summer for members of what is known as cafe society to exploit ladies and gentlemen whose fame smacks a trifle of the notorious. They become guests of honor at the spreading restaurant tables.

One was a curly-haired cabaret performer who shook the sawdust from his feet to be glorified in a musical comedy. Then there was a college-bred Indian, the obscure author of a dirty book, a shaggy-haired foreigner who told ribald stories and several others.

Jovial Mae West, who portrays a hard-boiled Bowery "gal" of thirty years ago, is also the object of much attention, being invited to teas, apartment parties and cafes. One of the high spots was to visit her dressing-room after a performance and listen to her picturesque observations.

Among Miss West's experiences while struggling for recognition as a playwright and star was a brief "stretch on the island" because of the realism in her play, "Sex." She is said to have a hilarious as well as sarcastic style in recounting this episode.

The object of cafe society is to be noticed and these seems to be no better way than to drag in some one by the heels who has achieved big thick headlines. The story of one freakish dinner party and its result is being told about the town.

A hostess was arranging with the proprietor of a cafe for a dinner party and dropped a few names of those who would be among the guests. The manner of the proprietor abruptly froze. "I am sorry," he said, "I can not serve you. This is a restaurant—not a freak show."

It is in night clubs the chasers of near celebrities find dandy settings for their efforts to show off. Here the atmosphere is mellow and those who look upon soandsos as perfectly dandy do so only for the evening.

Third avenue has a curiosity shop specializing in Distinguished Service crosses. Heroes who have fallen on evil days go there to pawn the symbol of their courage in better days. They receive about three dollars for their cross and few ever return to reclaim them. This furnishes a theme for something or other. I don't know just what.

People living in the neighborhood of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in West Fifty-Fourth street, are said to set clocks by his methodical goings and comings. He departs in the morning almost invariably at the same hour and returns with the same precision. No mid-town home has the regularity of the Rockefeller household. The lights are dimmed at the same hour—about 10:30. Young Mr. Rockefeller—he is really fifty-four—has a passion for household economy. Any extravagance by servants is tabooed. For years he never tipped, but now he gives the exact, but customary, ten per cent. He is a pleasant neighbor, having a bow for servants in nearby households and frequently stops to chat with the street cleaner in the block.

The Rockefeller home while ample is not movie-starrish. It is of stone and has a gymnasium on the roof. After nightfall it is not distinguished from any other house on the block save for a man in plain clothes who walks up and down in front of the house. He is the private night watch.

The Way of the World.

BY GROVE PATTERSON.

The American Bar association decides to raise a $50,000 fund. It will provide a three-year scholarship at a good law school for a college graduate. It will also provide a gold medal to be given each year to the lawyer who has performed the most distinguished service for the advancement of jurisprudence. Now all this gives a special and good reason for the life of an organization. There are, of course, too many organizations. Many of them are mere time-killers. They furnish alibis for men, never quite grown up, to get together and play and laugh about so-called prohibition. Now and then an organization decides to do something definite. That's a good sign.

Harper Leech, who writes ably for the Chicago Tribune, speaking of liberalism of thought and writing, refers to "our American brand of Wall street pinks and their kept liberals who, by the way, conduct most of our reviews and journals of opinion—this country apparently being too poor to maintain a sound and realistic periodical press to represent its virile and nationalist opinion."

These are sharp words and fairly well deserved. We do have a few outspoken periodicals, for the most part badly edited by radicals who can't seem to keep their feet on the ground and who are so extreme in their views as to be useless as leaders. Real liberal opinion, ably expressed, sane comment on American life and manners, by a man who thinks rather than by one who merely foams at the mouth, is devoutly to be desired.

Bad musicians should keep away from West Africa. Slitting the mouth of horn blowers who don't do well is a favorite practice among some more or less savage tribes. Drum beaters who don't beat nicely may have their ears cut off or, if they are very bad, may lose their hands. This may all be a bit drastic, but in view of the increasing number of saxophone players, the attention of the American public is respectfully and somewhat earnestly called to these practices.

Stories are told about beggars who make large sums daily. Perhaps a few do. Most of them do not. Probably few people really like to beg. Most of them are reduced to that trade by dire circumstances. And better that a few beggars do well than that the American heart should grow too hard.

STANDARD WARRANTY FOR PNEUMATIC CASINGS AND TUBES

"Every pneumatic tire of our manufacture bearing our name and serial number is warranted by us against defects in material and workmanship during the life of the tire to the extent that if any tire fails because of such defect, we will either repair the tire or make a reasonable allowance on the purchase of a new tire."

THIS broad warranty against tire defects, unlimited as to mileage or time, is the most constructive guarantee of service ever offered the public.

Director General, THE RUBBER INSTITUTE, Inc.

THE tire industry has taken great steps forward in the past decade.

Tire quality has been improved immeasurably; tire prices have been reduced to the lowest levels in history.

And now the industry has taken another great forward step.

The manufacturers of 95% of the tires made in the United States guarantee tires bearing their names and serial numbers against defects for the life of the tire.

What an improvement this is over the old days of the now out-worn "definite mileage guarantee."

The era of the mileage guarantee came to an end when users realized that good tires are made of rubber and cotton—not printed promises.

They discovered that "there are no miles in a bottle of ink."

They discovered that you cannot put mileage into tires by written guarantees—it must be built in. No mileage guarantee will hold the tread to the carcass:—nothing but craftsmanship does that.

They discovered that no mileage guarantee will toughen the rubber or strengthen the cotton cord:—only the know-how of experienced tire builders does that.

They discovered that no mileage guarantee will extend the life of a tire to its utmost capacity:—only good driving and care for your tires does that.

On the other hand, car owners found that the definite mileage guarantee had these failings—

1. It benefited the driver who misused his tires and misrepresented his mileage, at the cost of the honest and careful driver who did not abuse his tires, and who was truthful in stating his mileage, or honest in admitting he did not know his mileage.
2. It put a premium upon heedless driving by removing the penalty for traveling with tires under-inflated or wheels out of line.
3. Its cost was a buried expense that bore on the user of the tires without adding any commensurate value.

The first year following the elimination of the definite mileage guarantee, over thirteen million dollars was saved by doing away with adjustments against neglect and abuse of the careless driver, and was put back into the product for the benefit of all drivers alike.

The industry simply converted non-productive cost into good sound rubber and cotton. Every user benefited equally; tire prices came down; tire quality went up. Today the American tire user is enjoying the lowest-cost tire miles in the history of the world.

The high quality of present day tires has made possible the prevailing standard tire warranty, extending over the life of the tire—the broadest and most constructive guarantee of service that can be written—a declaration that enables the manufacturers of over 95% of the production in the country to stand squarely behind the quality and serviceability of their products, as they wish to stand.

Meditations OF A Married Woman

BY HELEN ROWLAND

"Little Loves"—and Heartculture

How many women can a man love? asks the Philosopher.

"How many women ARE there?" retorts the Cynic.

One hundred men and one hundred women have confessed to 1,358 loves among them, according to "cold statistics on warm emotions" recently acquired through a questionnaire.

That gives them almost seven loves apiece. Lucky lovers! Miracle workers! Prize self-deceivers.

One real love in a lifetime is all that you or I or the average man or woman can honestly claim. And we are highly fortunate if we can manage to hold onto that! We are seldom able to bank all our hopes on a second romance. We can't scrape together enough illusions!

Of course, there are lots of little throbs and thrills and false alarms in everybody's life that LOOK like love and would pass for "something just as good!" But one Summer usually takes all the color out of these and wears off all their luster.

Every man remembers his puppy infatuation—that sweet, shy, inarticulate, glamorous thrill he felt for some little girl with extra long curls or a twinkling smile. His first unselfish emotion!

And there is his idealistic love, usually for a woman twice his age, which is one quarter vivid admiration for her worldly wisdom and three-quarters his yearning to be mothered.

And later there comes what he fancies is his Grande Passion—his tempestuous dalliance for a chorus girl or a dazzling divorcee or a professional vamp—ANY woman, so it's the "wrong woman"!—the dizzy infatuation that makes his head whirl, and leaves him with a painful emotional hangover.

And there is his placid platonic affair with some good little pal; ALMOST love—except for the lack of passion and tenderness.

And there is his Indian Summer romance! And all his other little loves; Summer loves, near-loves, passing fancies. ALL loves are beautiful, while they last, and so long as you THINK they are love!

And a man's little loves are part of his emotional education, provided he does nt mix them or cheapen them. The heart as well as the mind and body needs exercise or it is apt to grow flabby and sluggish. It takes a little heartculture, now and then, to keep up the glow of life!

But when you find the One Real Love, you know at once that all the others were just little curtain raisers. And four out of five were false alarms!

Seven loves in a lifetime? Not even Don Juan could boast that many!

GOVERNOR SMITH wants "reasonable contentment for those who toil" and thinks the government should be concerned about "the legitimate interest of labor."

He believes in collective bargaining" to put labor on a basis of equality with the employer, and says, "Labor is not a commodity." He indorses the opinion of Justice Taft, who said: "Government of relations between capital and labor by injunction is an absurdity."

GOVERNOR SMITH wants "legislation and advancement of working men and women, proper care of maternity, infancy and childhood, and safeguarding of public health.

TRUE equality of women is advocate in "all avenues of opportunity for which they can qualify."

Veterans in distress should be looked after by the government as promptly as they attended to their war duties.

Governor Smith favors strict immigration, but objects to "principles of restriction designed to discriminate against certain nationalities."

His speech covers the ground.

The country has heard from both candidates, and the fight is on. It will probably be mild and gentle until the end of September or later. Then you'll see a battle.

APPLY BRAINS TO THEIR JOBS

Ellen Wallace Hopper

Many women in my audiences ask whether my teeth are my own. It probably is natural to wonder whether a woman in her sixties has retained her teeth. Mine are my own and I'm careful of them. I have always been as diligent in cleaning my teeth as I have been in caring for my skin. I used to use a dentifrice a mouth wash and a deodorant to sweeten my breath.

Now I am able to obtain all these necessary guards in a tooth paste, called Quindent, the five-in-one dentifrice. It has a pleasant, mild taste, is an effective cleanser and polisher and best best of all, contains milk of magnesia, which I formerly had to use separately as a mouth wash. This combats the ever-present acids, which are destructive to enamel.

Experts collaborated to produce Quindent. Now you can get it at your local toilet counter. The price is 50 cents for a large tube.—Adv.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Humorous Boyhood Adventure

By JUDD MORTIMER LEWIS

ANOTHER hot day when I let Jubilee down by the rope in his teeth. It would have been Thursday if there had been any school. I will be glad when I can go skating and can slide down the hill on my slay. I never did like the summer time. A fella has no more fun in winter with snowballs and everything to throw, and he don't have to take the cows to the pasture. The dust on the road was ankle deep and we all went down the middle of the road like we were choo-choo cars, kicking up dust till anyone could hardly see us, and all of the people on the side of the street where the dust blowed would come running out and holler at us to stop, and shake their fists at us after we got past. I never did see so many ladies get so mad. Then a big boy came out before we got to his place and told us to stop or he would make us. "You and who else?" I asted him. And he was going to say something easy when Feeble sidled up to him and rolled up her eyes at him, and he looked supprized at first and then he grinned back at her till he about showed every tooth in his head, and then she told him we were just enjoying ourselves and didn't want to make anybody mad, and she told him it was beans of fun and asted him to try it with her, and she took hold of his hand and we all went along and he was making more dust than any of us, and a man came running out of the next yard and grabbed him, and told him he had gave him credit for having a little sense, and he snatched him across the ditch and into the yard so sudden that his heels didn't even drag, and he drug him along and into his garage and shut the door, and we stayed there grinning till the fella had stopped hollering, and then we went along and kicked up more dust than ever. I guess all fathers are alike. They think that everything a fella likes to do is wrong. We all took the things out of our pockets and went in the creek clothes and all to get the dust out of our clothes. And the girls had on their old clothes and they went in too and we flang mud and spattered water at each other and had a good time. I am going to learn Younise how to swim. I had me arms around her stummick holding her on top of the water in quite a deep place and was telling her how to make her arms and feet go when Feeble came up behind me and tickled me under the arms, and I can't stand it to be tickled, and when I had pushed her away and looked around Younise was nothing but a string of bibbles. I reached down and brung her up, but she almost coughed her head off. I went to bed early, and before I went to sleep I heard rain on the roof.

Love's Awakening

The Heart Story of a Womans Lasting Affections

BY ADELE GARRISON

Marion Maintains an Attitude of Hostility

MARION MORTON did not turn her head the fraction of an inch as her stepfather asked her mother her opinion of the new car's behavior in traffic. Nor did she halt perceptibly in the conversation she was carrying on with Mary Harrison. But I watching her closely, saw the little rippling shudder that went over her as she heard Harry Underwood address Lillian as "old girl," saw the subsequent stiffening of the muscles at the back of her neck, and knew that she was fiercely resentful, not so much at the familiar address as at the loving comradely admiration which invested his tone.

At first I thought Lillian had not noticed the girl's reaction, and was thankful. Her voice was warmly enthusiastic, her face unruffled and smiling as she answered:

"She's the 'Liverpool packet,' lad."

"Does that mean 'good Lord let her go'?" he finished the quotation with a grin.

"Later," she hedged hurriedly. "Say east of Patchogue."

"We're not going that way," her husband informed her. "Too much traffic. The old Dicky-bird has a new way figured out—a luscious peach—a bit longer than the main one, but little traffic and new concrete, most of 'em."

Lillian and I groaned in unison. Many and hectic have been our adventures when Dicky has elected to find new roads, forsaking the well-beaten ones.

"The last time the Dicky-bird found a new road for us," Lillian said, "we broke two springs on a spur of wood road—a short cut which was to save an hour or there-abouts of time. We spent the night, Madge and I, at the worst hotel on Long Island, while Dicky went on to New York, and we waited the next day until the drattled thing was fixed, and then Madge drove it home."

"You'd trim a Christmas tree with crepe," Dicky told her truculently. "Just for that, Harry, don't take 'em over the new roads. Go on down through the thickest traffic you can find."

But Mr. Underwood shook his head with decision.

"Nothing doing," he said "I'm sold on the new way. Don't worry, old dear," he turned to his wife, again. "I've been over the most of the way with the Dicky-bird trying out cars. It's a pippin. We'll turn off the double boulevard about a mile before Jamaica, cut across on a bully turnpike to the Motor Parkway, speed along that to Lake Ronkonkoma, then amble north and east to Port Jefferson, then across to Riverhead on that new road and thence home."

"If you're sure there are no detours, you've picked a course free of traffic," Lillian conceded.

"Nary a detour," her husband assured her, "and we can step on it on the Parkway and at the east end. We'll have you home, Duchess, before you have time to cook up a grouch."

Lillian laughed indulgently, but as her eyes went to Marion's lovely head stiffly erect with an air of uncompromising rigidity about it, the merriment died from her face and her lips tightened into a thin line of pain.

Useless to pretend that I had not seen, and so I laid my hand over one of hers. She turned it quickly, palm upward and grasped mine fiercely, clinging to it as if the contact helped her. After a few seconds, I spoke in the inaudible murmur she taught me in our old secret war service together.

"Don't take that child so seriously," I begged. "She's acting the way a spoiled small boy does when somebody wants to share his favorite toy. But she's coming out of it slowly, and she'll convalesce all the faster if you don't take her temperature every so often."

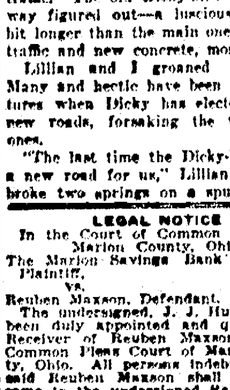
Sometimes it's the "nerves." Other times, dyspepsia. But whatever the cause of an aching head, there's an antidote. Bayer Aspirin stops such pain. Millions wouldn't use it if it didn't! And doctors wouldn't tell men and women to take it freely, if they didn't know it to be perfectly harmless. (Has no effect whatever on the heart.) Genuine Aspirin has Bayer on the box, and proven directions inside.



The Constant Flame

A ROMANCE OF GRIPPING HUMAN INTEREST

BY WINIFRED VAN DUZER

CHAPTER THIRTY-NINE

THE sunroom was finished now and it was even prettier, Emily told herself, than she had expected. All light and blithesomeness, it seemed always the soft edge of morning within those glowing walls.

There was a winding thread of green in the cushions and hangings; the joyous green of early summer. And the green rugs she had placed about were like woodland moss on the polished floor. A happy room. Even Agnes was pleased with it.

Kingdon Coles was invited. He would come a little early so they could have an hour in the sunroom before they went downstairs for dinner. An hour watching the light slide to the far edge of the river and linger on the Tarrytown hills as the sun dropped down the west.

And perhaps if he asked her while they sat there she would set a wedding day. This thought frightened her a little; still there was no use putting it off. Feel differently, probably, with everything settled and Agnes won over.

Agnes hadn't said much about Marts lately but then he hadn't been dropping in so frequently since he'd been in Judge Morrow's office.

She came home at noon and began to make preparations. There was to be Maryland chicken for dinner after a recipe Frances Halden had given her and she had to bring this to readiness as well as the dressing for the salad. Agnes did not approve the dressing.

"But you'll eat a little of it, Mun darling? It would look so funny if you didn't."

"You care much what this man thinks, Emmy? I'm a plain old woman; too plain for their grand ways."

"Oh, you're not! Nothing too grand for you, dear. I want you to have everything."

"Everything's not for some. I mind the time your poor father—"

"Dearest, please don't think about that. Just talk of other things tonight, won't you. Just this and that, the way people do."

"Ah, well." With a sigh.

Supposing Agnes should start telling King of Steve and her early days with him. Emily could imagine his polite interest, the ennui behind it.

"But I shouldn't feel so about him," she thought—why, I should be glad he is coming. I should wish him to meet my people and see my home. Yet I'm all on edge. I don't know—can't understand—"

She swept and dusted the living room; there was a moment when she considered taking away the crocheted tidies. But a bit of independence stopped this.

"If he doesn't like me in spite of these he doesn't care enough to marry me. Going to all this bother, feeling so—but I suppose most girls do the same. Natural to want to appear your best."

She had told him the way to the house. "I live on the Hill—" blushing a little. But he didn't know regional distinctions in Lyall; that meant nothing.

Shortly after 5 she expected him and put on her prettiest blue frock and brushed her hair till it shone like a nimbus. Then she sat in the sunroom to wait.

It was 6:30 when she heard his car turning into the street. By this time she was in a fever of nerves; the sunset was all over and their bright hour vanished. Besides the dinner would be spoiled; Agnes had been keeping it warm to the very limit of endurance. They would have to eat first and sit in the sunroom afterward; she tried to comfort herself with the thought that her lights there gave a lovely glow.

All of this rushed from her mind at sight of the blank incredulity in his face.

"So this is the place! Came up here once but thought I was mistaken." He put out his hand, still uncertainly. "How are you?"

"Come in, King, do. I wondered what had happened."

She led him into the living room and he sat down before the crayon portrait. She saw him turn his eyes, a look of pain sweeping his face. When Agnes came and he executed his low, foreign bow over her hand, Emily was acutely conscious of her mother's embarrassment.

He was elaborately courteous. He went far out of the way to make conversation and Emily was grateful for this. She'd have been willing to have listened to one of Agnes' reminiscences so tense did the evening become before the dinner was over.

She could think of nothing to say. Something, she knew, was wrong but what it was she couldn't guess. Now and then she caught the Viking eyes fixed on her in a piercing scrutiny; always it sent the red up her throat. Once she felt herself growing hysterical as Kitten gave her a little grimace.

Agnes refused the salad but that didn't matter. She could eat none of it herself. She looked at the terrible golden-oak buffet—Steve had bought it years back and it had strange little shelves and dust-catching curlicues of wood—and wished she was dead.

Eventually Agnes said the thing Emily oneway knew was coming. "I've a good daughter in Emmy, Mr. Colon. She's taken care of us since her father died."

"Yes, indeed. She's a brave little kid."

It was sincere enough but Emily's strained imagination found a note of condescension. Certainly King's usual loverliness was absent as he followed her into the living room while Agnes and Kitten gathered up the dishes.

It didn't seem worth while to take him to the sunroom after that. And when he remembered, all at once, that he must leave early she rose quickly and walked with him to the door.

He gave her a hasty kiss and she stood there in the dark listening to the sound of the motor growing faint down the street. Then she crept upstairs and sat with her head on the rounded wicker table and all the undraped windows of the sunroom stared at her like curious eyes.

Such a happy thing she had planned—and now the place held only bewilderment.

It wasn't that she felt a great love for King. But he'd seemed to care—to want her so. And he came like a stranger and scrutinized her across the table.

What was he thinking when he did that? What was there about this she failed to comprehend? "Why?" she kept asking herself quite as she had done when she was a very little girl.

"Why!"

The next day she tried to persuade herself that she had been over sensitive. The flowers came as usual; they came for a week, in fact, before she arrived at the shop one morning and found no box at the door.

She telephoned his office in the afternoon but they said he was out.

She received a note then. He was busy now with new shows opening; he was sorry but he wouldn't be able to visit Lyall for a time. Had they, perhaps, made a mistake? She was such a fine little friend he was sure she'd understand. And he remained hers sincerely.

It was like a slap in the face, that note. She read it twice before she tore it into tiny pieces and sent them drifting into the wastebasket.
